BETTY BETZ

COLUMNIST FOR KING FEATURES

BETTY, in a short informal talk, has some witty and pertinent things to say about what young people of the many countries she visited are thinking about. With her usual light touch, she will tell some of their really serious problems. Author of "Your Manners are Showing"; "Look Who's Talking" and "Betty Betz Bets", blonde Betty won't be able to do her usual sketches at the luncheon, along with her bright words, but she has threatened to bring along her drawing board, anyway.

AMERICAN AIRLINES

OPC BULLETIN ..... PAGE FOUR ..... JUNE 21, 1949

Despite a blistering night on Wednesday, June 15th, more than eighty five members and guests gathered at the New York Newspaper Guild to greet the war correspondents who made the "beachhead re-visited" pilgrimage via American Overseas Airlines. The forty correspondents had arrived that morning at nine o'clock, but after catching up on some sleep, about fourteen of them showed up, nobly headed by BEN WRIGHT, chief of staff, but lacking "Red" Smith, who was down with laryngitis.

JO DRISCOLL, called the "Senator" was toastmaster and called on the members of the trip who were present. Many had left New York to get home quickly to deadlines out of town. Harry Butcher was the "historian of the trip" while Jack Leib of NBC took moving pictures of the two weeks' junket.

JOHN H. THOMPSON of the Chicago Tribune said that the group had covered 12,000 miles and probably about that much whiskey. From London, the boys went to the beachheads, Utah and Omaha, from where they branched out to search for their own particular bailiwicks used during D-Day. But it was hard for most of them to find old landmarks because the countryside had changed so much. George Hicks said that it was a heartening thing to see how the ruins had been built up and covered over just as time covers the wounds and scars of battle in human hearts.

CLARK LEE, suffering from laryngitis also (caught from some Calvados in Normandy) was interpreted by CORNELIUS RYAN and JACK THOMPSON when he said that the boys had gone from the beachheads to Paris, thence to Luxembourg, Weisbaden and Berlin and Frankfurt, in the last three of which the Press Clubs had made them very much at home. General Patton's grave in Luxembourg was visited. It is surrounded by the graves of the men who died there with a great Army Chief.

LARRY LESUEUR had been measured for some suits in London but when he got back to pick them up, he had gained about fifteen pounds (as did most of them) and so the suits will have to be shipped to him later. HAL BOYLE said that the wives wanted to go along but that it was not possible and would have been "like taking a ham sandwich to a banquet". CORNELIUS RYAN said that there was only one casualty on the trip, Bill Douglas, who was left in the hospital in Belfast. LOU AZRAEL's wife, SARA IAMPORT, was the only wife who followed the group by the next plane wherever they went.

The mayor of Luxembourg played the piano for them all night and then met them at the Grand Duchess' reception the next morning at 9 A.M. All in all, it was a trip that none of the lucky AOA passengers will ever forget -- with its said aspects and yet merry times, too.
